It is natural that indignation and fury, if long pent up, should rage fiercel when the floodgates are loosened, and hence it is not surprising that the exasperated populace in the Chusan district should proceed to great lengths in their opposition supernumeraries, who are drawn from the Band to the Authorities. Unfortunately these insurrections have a strong tendency to spread. The inhabitants of adjoining districts, who so conspicuous in smateur supers generally. have long smarted under the oppressive exactions of the mandarins, are often only too willing to join in a demonstration against the grasping officials, while there is always a considerable percentage of smugglers and pirates in China ready to join in promoting are apprehended. Rev. ARTHUR E. MOULE. London: Seeley. Jackson, and Halliday, Fleet street; Church kong : Lane, Crawford and Co.

The narrative of the Mission of the Church Missionary Society in Cheh-kinng, though briefer than the story of the Mission in Fuh-kien, is more connected, less diffusive, and equally interesting. The author starts with a tereely written description of the small but populous and ling the forest country. They squat, and form of Cyprus, and would always afford safe shelter important province of Cheh kiang. Hang chow, the capital of the province, is one of the most ancient and renowned cities of the Central Kingdom, and has for centuries been many other cities and towns it suffered frightfully it is with these sort of hardy and brave pioneers the Ayes and Kurrachee Railway." during the Taiping rebellion, and it is said that four-fifths of its buildings were laid low by the gaged in the timber trade, or else with the long-haired insurgents. Since the reduction of savages themselves. The campher tree can be the Taipings the prosperity of the city has found in almost every range, and the aborigines lowever, to a great extent revived, and it bids fair in time to regain its old importance. The Church Missionary Society did not commence its labours in Cheh-kinng until 1848, when the Revs. R. H. Cobbold and W. A. Russell reached Ningpo, at which port the head quarters of the Cheli-kinng mission were established. The their whole earnings amount to barely first two converts were baptised three years subsequently. At the outset, therefore, the nission in Cheh-kinng was more promising than that of Fuh-kien. Yet after the lapse of twentyight years the author has to confess that the more than so an hundred. During the Tailarms and were frequently able to give protec. ion to their people. The chapter which deals with those stirring and excited times is perhaps; he most interesting in the book. After the time alleged that the Prosbyterian missioneries enticed women into their compound and then been completed. Although, at the request of the suspicions allayed. From that time up to the summer of 1876 disquicting rumours and groundless agitations have been kept affoat among the people with little intermission by the anti-foreign party; and these baseless fabrications have no doubt largely tended to retard the success of the missions in Cheh-kiang. Mr. Moule also considers the practice of ancestral worship, with which Feng-shui is so intimately connected, to be another great obstacle to the apread of Christianity. We are tempted to reproduce his re marks on this subject in full. He says :-

The Chinese think that the soul of man is twofold They distinguish an anima and an anima; the first is the breath of heaven, and at death returns thither. The anima is the material, or snimal element, and returns to earth at death. The common people, mopast eleven o'clock, I went on shore with two to the tomb by the material soul, and that the spiritual nature hovers round the old home, and therefore, as pare dinner for all of us. THE BANKRUPTOY BUSINESS.

"Boggs," said Mrs. B., suddenly, the other evening, looking up from the paper she was reading, "why don't you go, into bankruptcy und have style about you?" "Go into bankruptcy?" repeated Boggs, "what for?" "Because it is the fashion," replied Mrs. B. "Everybody who is anybody goes into bankruntey now-a-days. Our peighbours are all getting the start of us. Here's Soggs who lives across the street, he is in the list to-day. Now we have lived in this town a good deal longer than Soggs has. Why couldn't you have your name in the papers as well as he?" "I don't want my name in the papers in that way," said Boggs. "That's the way; always behind everybody else. A DISPARAGING ESTIMATE OF ENGLISH SCENERY.

Most English scenery is (I must confess) wearisome so me. An American who lands here for the first time generally admires the the country because it reminds him of a garden. That is just why I dislike it. It is so pretty, small, and hide-bound-so thoroughly that one can scarcely conceive the very existence of cosmical forces. Man seems to have created the world—It is a mere passive inscientific museum. Look at one of those characteristic English landscapes which throw. some people into ecstasies. The little hummocks that do duty for hills limit your horizon to some half mile in radius. As if to demonstrate the struggles of nature, they grams, which scorn even to adapt themselves. to the natural form of the ground. The British country house in its ancestral domain is surely the very symbol of dull propriety. . It is redolent of utter respectability, of dressing for dinner, and talking of the game laws, and appearing in the family pew, and slaughterment. A park is to a really noble landscape along the river had ground through soles and whize! The spear flew over my back, and Alpine chame is or the condors of the Andes. If ever I have myself, it will be to one of the out of my leather portmanteaus, and slipof giving a little vague interest to relieve the climbing over the rocks and rugged steeps again and again manifested despite their atadmit. They are admirally adapted for pretty that I was enabled, by appealing to the are making eyes at each other across a stile. Persevere in the manufacture of sandals for enemy of the beautiful. It means a preference of oddity and eccentricity for its own sake; a taste for queer freaks of architecture his white feet to the vulgar gaze of the aboriand scenery, simply because useless; not as transcending mere utilitarian purpose, but as falling short of them : and therefore an enjoyment of decay, or the merely pretty, which is incompatible with any serious or exalted sentiment.—Cornhill Mayazine.
